friends as follows:

My fellow-citizens, I feet deeply sensible of the honor you have done me to-night in calling to congratulate me upon an event which is of deep interest to myself and my constituents, although I had not supposed that it extended much beyond that. I am deeply sensible of it, not so much as a personal compliment to myself as a compliment to the noble democracy of the county which it is my honor and my good fortune to represent in the Congress of the United States. [Applause.] We have no national issues at present pending before the country; there are no questions that are agitating the country now, of a national character, upon which the people of the whole country are called to pass judgment, or such as it there are no questions that are agitating the country now, of a national character, upon which the people of the whole country are called to pass judgment, or such as it might be supposed the people of Washington would feel a very deep interest in. In the year 1856, this country was convulsed from one end to the other with questions that did make every man's heart, who loved his country, throb with anxiety and fear. But that has all passed away, and we are now in the mislat of peace and prossperity. Our country is happy and united; and although, in consequence of financial revulsions, we are suffering in some parts of our country, and to some extent perhaps throughout the whole of it, yet Providence has blessed us with plenty. Our country is at peace; the Union is loved and revered, and is more strongly comented together now perhaps than it has ever been during any period in our history.

I regard this compliment, my fellow-citizens, as a compliment to the old and noble country of Berks, which I have had the honor to represent now for nearly eight years in Congress. [Applause.] I take the compliment for her; and although, as I have said, no questions of national importance are now agitating the country, I accept this call as a token of the high regard for the fieldity of that old county in standing by me and in sustaining the administration of James Buchanan and the unitional democracy. [Cheers.] That old county, fifty-eight years ago, when Thomas Jefferson was first elected President of the Christ Adams. When Jefferson was elected President she cast her vote for him; and from that day to this that old county has nover faltered in a single instance. Increasing her majority from year to year, she cast nearly seven thousand majority from year to year, she cast nearly seven thousand majority was elected President she cast her vote for him; and from that day to this that old county has never fatered in a single instance. Increasing her majority from year to year, she cast nearly seven thousand majority for James Buchanan when he was a candidate for the presidency in 1856. [Applause.] Mr. Buchanan was elected, and he marked out his course to the country in his inaugura; aldress. During the last session of Congress, after his annual message was delivered, the country was again convulsed by questions which, although of a temporary character, as the citizens of Washington are well aware, kept it in a state of anspense for several months. I felt it to be my duty to stand by the President in that issue. I felt it to be my duty as a democrat to labor unceasingly and with all the power that I possessed, as the representative of a district that cast seven thousand majority, to sustain the administration; and I need not tell you what the result was. After the adjournment of Congress, in accordance with the peculiar features of our institutions by which every representative is required to render an account to his constituents. I went home to render an account to his constituents, I went home to render an account to his constituents. I went home to render an account to his constituents, I went home to render an account to his constituents, that the contest for my nomination was one that would excite any deep interest in the country at large; and even here in the city of Washington, where I have so long resided as almost to become one of you, I hardly thought this contest would be of much interest to you. But I fored, before I had returned home a week, that all the powers of fection had been arrayed acainst me. I found.—at thought this contest would be of much interest to you. But I formd, before I had returned home a week, that all the powers of faction had been array diagramst me. I found—act dreaming that I was regarded of so much importance—that I was considered a choice victi a, to be immolated upon the altar, and all kinds of denunciations were heaped upon me. But I submitted my name to my fellow-citizens, and consented to be a candidate for nomination for the fifth time, for the sole purpose of presenting to my constituents the question whether they would endorse my course in Congress, and in relation to the adminmy constituents the question whether they would en-dorse my course in Gongress, and in relation to the admin-istration of Mr. Buchanan. The question was contested fleredly; and you are well aware, for it has appeared in the public prints, I had the pleasure of finding that one hundred and fifty delegates from my own county gave it their unanimous approval and endorse-ment. I confess to you, my fellow-citizens, that I did feel proud of that endorsement of my course, not solely because it was an and account of ment. I confess to you, my fellow-citizens, that I did feel proud of that endorsement of my course, not solely because it was an endorsement of my course, not solely because it was an endorsement of my own political action, but I felt especially proud that that old county, which had never faltered in standing up for the principles of the democratic party for more than half a century, came forward to endorse my political course in sustaining the President of the United States in the patriotic measures which he had adopted to uphold the constitution and the Union. [Great applause.]

My fellow-citizens, I repeat—for I know that you do not expect me to make a speech, and I shall not occupy your time in attempting to discuss any national questions—I regard this call upon me as a compliment to the good old county of Berks. I thank you for the honor you have done me, and bid you good night.

ou have done me, and bid you good night.

Mr. Jones appears to be in fine health, and was, of course, in the happiest of moods, as who would not be that had so recently received the honor of a unanimous nomination to Congress from the domocracy of Old Berks.
At the conclusion of his remarks, the band renewed its performance, and the company present offered to Mr. Jones their personal felicitations.

ALEXANDRIA ITEMS.—The Winchester Presbytery held a session of three days in Alexandria last week, commencing on Thursday and ending on Saturday night. Work has been resumed on section A of the Alexanria, Loudoun, and Hampshire raffrond, near Alexandria, and will be vigorously prosecuted by Mr. James Reach, contractor. The bridges over the canal and the Alexandria and Washington turnpike will be speedily constructed, and the track graded to the depot, so as to ad. ration attorney was consulted, and gave the foliomit of the laying of the rails at an early day. We were yesterday shown a petition, numerously signed by property holders on King street, (says the Alexantte) praying the city council to have that street repayed, according to the provisions of the amended charter of the city. An Approximative Reader .- It is pleasing to those who are concerned in the laborious and never-ceasing duty of lally supplying mental publishes to the reading public to find that their efforts are appreciated; and, as an illustration of that class of appreciative readers, we subjoin what 'Quantico," the well-known correspondent of the Alexdria Sentinel, says respecting last Sunday morning's

Union;

"We do not know a more interesting paper to the general readers, as well as to the politicians, than the Sunday morning Union. In addition to the usual political and local, editorial, and news, this morning's paper contains these admirable 'Metropolitan Musings,' by the 'Middle-Agod Man,' a spicy review of the books received during the week, a column and a half of 'religious intelligence,' compiled for the Union, and contains items interesting to every demonination—Jews or Christians, selections from foreign journals, &c.; in all eighteen columns of reading matter. It should be recollected that although the paper is dated on Sunday, the work is all done on Saturday; whereas, the papers dated on Monday morning are necessarily printed on Sunday."

THE THEATRE. -Othello was presented here last night an assemblage little, if any, inferior in numbers or in fashionable display and intelligence to that which or the preceding evening densely crowded this elegant and cosey little theatre. The effect of the performance in no wise fell short of that excited on the opening night Booth's Ingo was a most admirable effort. He wa-ably sustained by the efficient company—Messrs. Daly, Fiske, and Donaldson, Miss Parker and Mrs. Proctor eliciting much and earnest praise. To-night Shakspeare' master-piece, the exquisite and sublime tragedy of Lear will be presented under circumstances which fully insure its effective performance. The musical farce of The Loa of a Lover concludes.

Washington Franklin and Columbia Fire Companies, and the Metropolitan Hook and Ladder Company, of this city, ran down the turnpike to Alexan dria, on seeing the fire in that city last Sunday night. INCREASE OF SCHOOL TAX.

It will be seen, by reference to our report of the city council proceedings, published yesterday, that the lower board voted to lay upon the table a bill providing a special tax for the support of public schools. Pending the consideration of the bill before the school committee of the same board, the question having arisen as to the autherity of the corporation to impose the tax, the corpo-

OFFICE OF CORPORATION ATTORNEY, Washington, Sept. 6, 1858.

Sin: The question submitted to me by your commit-tee I understand to be. Whether, over and above the existing taxation of three-quarters of one per cent upon the assessments of real and personal property, it is com-petent for the corporation, if it shall be deemed expedi-ent, to lay and collect a special tax, graduated upon such assessments, for the support of the public schools? I shall, of course, abstain from any remarks upon the expediency of the proposed measure, and confine myself to the question of power under the charter. By the 7th section of the charter of 1826 it is provided with the request of the petitioners and let the work he begun at once. We know of no greater improvement to the appearance or welfare of the city than that our main thoroughfare should be improved. In its present condition, the street is a represent to the community, and the some it is repayed the better for the property holders, and for the city generally.

Theorems of the proposed measure, and confine myself to the question of power under the charter. By the 7th section of the charter of 1820 it is provided that the corporation "shall have full power and authority to lay and collect taxes upon the real and personal property within the said city; provided that no tax shall be half upon real property at a higher rate than three-quarters of one per centum on the assessment valuation thereof, except for the special purposes hereinafter provided."

Among the special purposes thereinafter provided is the following:

following:

Under the charter of 1820, therefore, it seems beyond question that there was power and authority to provide, by a special tax, over and above the three-quarters of one are contum. for the establishment superintendence and per centum, for the establishment, superintendence, and endowment of public schools.

By the charter of 1848 the charter of 1820 was continued in force for the term of twenty years from the 17th of May, 1848, or until Congress, by law, determine otherwise, "with the alterations, additions, explanations, and amendments" set forth in the sail last dated charter.

Among these "alterations," &c., is a grant of power "to lay and collect a school tax upon every free white male citizen of the age of twenty-one years and upwards of one dollar per annum."

If the subject of taxation for the public schools were not again and otherwise referred to in this new charter nations.

Mr. Wilsox submitted specimens of books proposed to be furnished for the use of the public schools by E. H. But-port which it contemplated. But, proceeding to enumerate certain special powers, that charter expressly grants the power to low and collect texts for the support of public

We have seen that this special power was granted by the charter of 1820 over and above the power of general taxation to the extent of three-quarters of one per centum

There was, therefore, no occasion for its repetition here There was, therefore, no occasion for its repetition here, except for the reason that a new provision had been made in favor of the public schools by authorizing a poll tax; and none then, if the poll tax, or that tax aided by the ordinary general fund, were intended to be the sole means of establishing, supporting, and endowing the public schools. It is evident, therefore, that it was the intention of Congress, notwithstanding the creation of the poll tax, to continue in the corporation the powers granted by the charter of 1829, to lay and collect a further special tax for the support of the public schools over and above the general taxation of three-quarters of one per centum

The next scalemic term will begin on the second Monday of September and end on the 30th of June following.

For thorough literary and scientific culture, sound elementary instruction, the efficiency and socient of the French department, and for social advantages, it is unsurpassed.

Every class, the primary as well as the senior, enjoys the personal supervision of the Transcrat, who is analisted by three ladies of ability, experience, and the highest education.

No school out of Paris possesses a purer standard of good French, or better corrective of bad French, in conversation and writing, or presente facilities for acquiring that language. It is strengthened by the accession of Frod Almandage.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOLS.—The Day-schools attueded to St. Vincent's Asylim will resume business on Welmesday next, lat of September. The large addition intely made to the house affirmed a time opportunity of rearranging the schools, and after the experience of last year they will begin this term with very many airvantages. There are, in fact, three distinct schools at St. Vincent's the Orphans' School, the Proc School for day scholars, and the Pay School. The first is, of course, for the orphan manness of the Asylum, whe, in their discipline and education, are under the immediate care of Sisters detailed for themselves. The scoond, or Pres School, is to meet the wants of poor children, whose paronts cannot pay, and all who are thus circumstanced are serrously pressed to send their children to this school. It is entirely distinct, but just as diligently at testied to as any other, the trailing and toushing being attretify able in all. It he results to not always what might be desired, perhaps the fairest explanation of it is, that the poor parents can soldom leave their children long enough at school. The third is the Pay School. The Sisters of Charity have a Pay School only in aid of the charities required for the support of the support is a school in the literally true that the Sisters beach, work, and earn for the orphans, as it is also tree that all who send their children. There exists a contribute to support the orphans; and if this were not so, the Sisters of Charity sould not be permitted to keep a Pay School. All that is truly required for the practical purposes of life, all that constitutes a sound and heart, there is no toper interesting or more important echool for girls within the District, combining, under a very judicious mannagement, comparatively futle expense to purchase with a fall average improvenent of the children.
